

Audi A4 2.0TDi 190hp Sport Saloon

The Audi A4 is one of the best cars I have driven, for the price, with plenty of gadgets for the techies.

Its closest rivals include the ubiquitous BMW 3 Series, the similarly popular Mercedes C-Class and the sharp-driving Jaguar XE.

PERFORMANCE: 5 Stars

The Audi A4 comes in a varied engine range. The 2.0TDi 150hp is a great engine with great economy, however if you want a little more poke to be the quickest to 30mph then either the 2.0TDi 190hp or the 3.0TDi 218hp. If you love your petrol motors then the 1.4TFSi 150hp or the 2.0TFSi 187hp are the ones for you.

All very economical and lovely to drive, to be honest, Audi don't produce bad cars...

COMFORT/HANDLING: 4 Stars

When ordering your new A4 have the leather interior, don't get me wrong, it's very comfortable but I feel the leather seats would finish it off in the SE and Sport models. Heated too as it's not getting any warmer...

One of the things I love about the Audi A4 is how everything is at your fingertips. From the Satnav to the 3 Zone climate control for the people in the back. I also love how you can adjust the ride style, so if you wake up in the morning wanting to race everything on the road, then stick it in Dynamic mode and away you go. It'll also stiffen up the suspension and steering. Or if your cruising the vast motorway system then stick it in Comfort mode and just breeze over the lumps and bumps in the road.

INTERIOR/EXTERIOR: 4 Stars

The interior in the Audi A4's are very refined, As mentioned before, you have everything at your fingertips which is great for comfort but also safety. Audi have thought of almost everything when it comes to the vast cabin space.

Even down to little things like extending the drivers and passengers seat to support more of your legs. Audi have produced the A4 since 1995 and I must admit, when I saw The Transporter, I thought it looked amazing, I think it has gone from strength to strength. Very slick and elegant even down to the LED indicators on the S-Line model.

The Audi A4 in general is a great all round, practical vehicle. If you have a family with a cavernous boot or a company car driver who like that little extra.

You won't go wrong with this car.
